Peter Miasek

Petrochemical Industry

Peter Miasek has a Ph. D. in Chemistry and 33 years' experience in the petrochemical industry. For the past 13 years, he has acted as senior environmental advisor in the field of contaminated sites for Imperial Oil, one of Canada's largest petrochemical companies. His work has involved advising on and implementing human health and environmental protective measures at a variety of contaminated sites across Canada.

Dr. Miasek is the chair of the Canadian Petroleum Products Institute (CPPI) National Contaminated Sites Committee, an industry association which reviews and responds to petroleum-related issues in the field of contaminated sites and brownfield redevelopment. Additionally, he sits on numerous multistakeholder committees across Canada that are tasked with developing new provincial or federal regulations, guidelines, protocols and processes for contaminated sites and brownfields.
